AN ERIAL CANNONADE WHICH PUT AN END TO SLEEP—THE STORM ON THE WATER— DAMAGES FROM LIGHTNING AND WATER IN THE CITY-THE VIOLET'S EXPERIENCE.

THE CITY—THE VIOLET'S EXPRRIENCE.

[Baltimore American, Saturday.]
The thunder-storm which visited Baltimore yesterday morning was the first of the season, and the cannonade in the beavens was unusually long and loud. The lightning was most blinding, and the terrible bursts of thunder were deafening. It seemed as though the warring elements had bent their energies on Baltimore, and the firsh and clash of the celestial artillery were terrifying, since none could tell from were terrifying, since none could tell from were terrifying, since none could tell from which direction the next would come, nor where it was likely to strike—there was no "dodging the flash." The preliminary burst commenced at 3:20 o'clock in the morning, and lasted until 4:30, after which there was a lull. During its continuance the rain fell in a perfect sheet, and the vivid flashes of lightning, followed almost instantly by the clash of thunder like a roar of artillery, were constant and incessant. The air seemed to be perfectly charged with the electric fluid, and the only wonder is that the damage done was not greater than reports state it to be. During this one hour reports state it to be. During this one hour and ten minutes the fall of rain was 0.66 of an inch. At 7:05 A. M. the storm broke out afresh, and continued until 11:30 A. M., during which time the rainfall amounted to two inches, making the rainfall for the day 2.66 inches. The storm was local, and hovered over Baltimore and vicinity. The pecultarity about it was that there was but little wind accompanying it. As it was, cellars were flooded, and streets were im-passable at points. The cars and omnibus lines did an immense business during the

ON THE WATER. Vessels arriving report that the storm be-Vessels arriving report that the storm below on the river was equally as fierce as in the city. Captain Parsons, of the schooner George Washington, which arrived from Jamaica yesterday, was off Seven-Foot Knoll at the time the first storm was at its beight, and says that he never experienced such lightning and thunder. So fast did flash follow flash, roar tread upon roar, that the whole scene was an illuminated pandemash follow hash, roar tread upon roar, that the whole scene was an illuminated pande-monium of frightful din. A small bay schooner just following the Washington was struck by the lighting and her maintopmast shivered to splinters.

WASHING THE CITY. Whatever barm was done in the city, there can be no question of the good done also. The dirty, muddy streets of the past few days looked, after the storm, as clean as could be desired. Harford run, Jones's Falls, and the Basin, with their own peculiar odors, were washed—if not whiter than snow, yet sufficient to make them, if not entirely agreeable, at least not so disagreeable as formerly. Strange to say, the tide did not rise materially in the barbor.

In the counties the rain no doubt proved a blessing to the farmers, and was looked where the crops were of such a character as not to be beaten down by the raging sheet of water that was showered down upon them from the overflowing cisterns of old Jupiter Pluvius. The good done will more than balance the harm, no doubt. The city water supply was benefited considerably, the lakes, both storage and distributing, being replenished materially.

DETAILS OF DAMAGES.

DETAILS OF DAMAGES.

The damage so far as ascertained is as follows: Lightning struck a locust-tree in front of the Marine Hospital, spiintered the tree, ran over the porch until it communicated with an iron water-pipe, and ran thence along the pipe to the ground, tearing the bricks and mortar out of the wall on its passage. Dr. Howard and his family were, of course, aroused, but no one was hurt. This was during the early morning storm. About 10 o'clock the lightning struck the house at Elkridge landing occupied by George Day and owned by Daniel Stumpey. The fluid ran down the chimney, stripped off the weatherbeard, and damaged the furniture. Miss Rex and Mrs. Vermelyon, who were in the house, were knocked down and stunned by the flash. The lightning-rod on the Merchants Exchange saved that building from demolition. The lightning also struck the chimney of the house occurred. ning also struck the chimney of the house oc-cupied by Edward Biggs, corner of Entaw and Hamburg streets, inflicting trifling damage. Other trifling damage was done at other points.

at other points. The heavy volume of water which came down the steep incline on Charles street, from Lexington to Baltimore, washed the earth from an excavation only recently filled up. Having gained a vantage point the water tore out the earth and laid the breach page from such to curb indentice. the water tore out the earth and laid the breach open from curb to curb, undermining the tracks of the North Baltimore Passenger Railway Company, and making a gap in the bed of the street fully 25 feet long and from curb to curb. A small watermain, laid bare and without support, broke, causing the water to spurt up to the beight of 65 feet or more. The cellar of the new building of Towner, Landstreet & Co.lwas filed to the depth of three or four feet. The cars of the North Baltimore line were compelled to turn from Lexington street, morth, into Charles, and phaetons were running in the afternoon, and the cars were running as afternoon, and the cars were running as

The roof of No. 24 north Charles sprung aleak, the water permeating through the floors and ceilings. John F. Rieggold, dealer in hosiery, had his goods badly damaged. Several inches of water were on the floor when the store was opened for business in the morning. L. Dietrich, artist, whose studio is on the third floor, lost several hundred dollars by damage to his material, pastely, and portraits.

An officer of the lightkouse tender Violet gives a graphic description of their experience of the storm. It struck them at twenty minutes before 2 offices on Friday morning as they were steaming up the bay, and just opposite the mouth of the Potomac. The wind was light son theast, and the bay was calm. There was a lieavy bank mac. The wind was light son theast, and the bay was calm. There was a lieavy bank of clouds to the southward, amon get which the lightning was playing in frequent and wivid flashes. Suddenly and without a previous note of warning, and without a previous note of warning, and without a previous note of the ses, came the storn. It came in a solid sheet that was more like the bursting of a water-spout than anything electhat it could be compared to. It strack the stout steamer, then running at the race of eight knots per hour, on the sterboard, and keeted her down to leeward and port until her leeward guards were buried, and it was some minutes before she could straighten herself up to an even keel. The main-cloud parted off to the westward, and as it passed off to the northward and westward it still carried the appearance of a solid sheet of water.

WHEREABOUTE OF MINE CURRIES.—[Special to the Cincinnati Commercial.]—Describe Mich., June 10.—To-day's dispatches from Duline, Texus, state that nothing is known of the whormsbouts of Ellen Cumming, the actrens, about whom Ben. Poytes was killed. Miss Cummins is in Windsor, opposite this city, visiting Mrs. T. W. Davy: In an interview with your correspondent to-day Miss Cummins stated that she had never received the slightest legal or official notification from any of the authorities in Texas regarding the case. Lacking such notice she did not feet inclined to put herself in what she believed would be danger of her life by voluntarily appearing as a witness against a popular Texas ruffian. In the interview of the mins, "Io conceal my whereabouts. My address has been published time and again in the theatrical papers, and only six weeks ago I met a brother of Currie in Washington, with whom I had some conversation regarding the matter. Of course, even if I had been notified to appear, it would not be for me to say whether I should do so or not."

A tripping footfall on the stair,
A vision from "Le Follet,"
A sudden fragrance in the air,
Ye god: I can this be Molly?
This "symphony" in siver white,
Perchance some star—off duty—
Coine down to set us mortals right
Upon iceas of beauty.

Or snowfiske that has lost its way,
Its path in life mistaken,
Some dream that flee at break of day,
And leaves us loth to waken.
The Molly that I knew of yore
Was but a chit of seven,
It sandailed shoes and pinafore,
While I was just eleven.

A pair of youthful lovers we
In days of childish oily.
Ere time had stole a march on me,
And carried off my Molly.
Relentless parents "came between;
Behold Miss Mary Seaton
Osnis gard to boarding-school routine,
And me—a lag at Eaton.

Ah. Molly, I shall ne'er forget.
The day on which we paried;
I think you cried, you small co-justic;
But I was broken-hearied.
A Niobe in garments brief,
Your tears were quite in season;
But then your doll had come to grief—An all-sufficing reason.

I still preserve with tender care
Your prayer-book, frayed with hissing—
A relic muce the worse for wear,
With half the pages missing.
Have you the many-bladed knife
I gave you once? I wonder.
The most unlucky gift in life;
It cleft our paths asunder.

My sweetheart of the past is dead That mourned her broken "Dolly" And now I turn to greet instead This most imposing Molly. Observe—a dress of filmy lace Beyond my powers of painting; A tinv vinaigrette—in case The maid should chink of fainting.

A dainty cap (I think I'm right)
The golden head surmounting,
A pair of gloves whose buttons quite
Defy attempts at counting.
A satin fan where baby loves
That seem to weary never,
Disport them elres in myrtie groves
That blossom on forever.

A gleam of gems whose eifin light in weird and fitful flashes Reflects the eyes—demurely bright Beneath their shady lashes * *

"And did you not forget?" she says,
"Forget you, Molly, never!
The love of Eton-jacket days
Is just as green as ever."
"You stily boy." "As stily still,
Ab, Molly, do not doubt it."
"My glove has come unbuttoned. Will * *
How long you are about it!"

Marshall McAfee read an original poem, concluding—

And the Press
Is a Titan which has learned to laugh
At the rich man's pelr, and the purple and gold
Of Royalty. Its royalty is the mind—
The soul—the heart! and its wrath aroused,
It can burtle thunderboits whose crash would deafen
The world! It sways the universe of Thought,
Let us then struggle onward, and if the way
Seems rough and our weary footsteps falter
As they climb the tollsome steeps, take Heart.
The Lord keeps watch forever! and those who climb
The Alors, whose toppling crags reach to the stars—
To earth-bound raze of men, all mist veils tossed
Aside by glow of Sun, like Canaan, know
Fair Italy shines out afar beneath the Southern sky.
So, for us all—for you, for me—all dangers

So, for us all—for you, for me—all dangers Past, when we have won with true endeavor The Goal of Immortality, we, too, Will see beyond Life's Alps lies—Italy.

It was very pathetic; but the journalists and accompanying statesmen rallied in time to eat a good dinner.
